Topic: Parental role in raising children

What did the philosophers mean when it came to saving the world from beauty in the past? Apparently, it refers to the beauty of a person's outer beauty, especially the exercise of a woman's gender. This is the opinion of Western philosophers, that is, the definition of Greek philosophy. How this feature is expressed in the ancient East. Logically, in the Eastern philosophy, beauty refers to aspects of man's botinian world, morality, and upbringing. This spiritual value has not lost its relation for centuries. Today, raising children in the family has become a pressing problem. As we analyze the fate of the next generation in today's globalization process, it is the sacred duty of today's generation to increase human values and perfect it and lead it to the next generation in order to preserve all sacred values. The resulting embryo was allowed to nutrients and then inserted into her wovoe, where it implanted. After all, the East has tremendous experience in this regard. It is known that the future of any nation, the dunyogarashi of the younger generation, will be formed in the original family, in the garden of children and in school. (Matthew 24:14; 28:19, 20) Jehovah's Witnesses would be pleased to discuss these answers with you. However, noting that Christianity, minority values, and traditions are currently being persecuted in the West from educational institutions, P.J. Buyukejen refers to the reader's attention one of the superstitious and influential sources of cultural revolutionaries, the Humanitarian Manifesto, published in 1973. Some of them say: "The belief in the creator of those who pray is an old-fashioned sarcophagus that does not prove . . .

Traditional morality did not meet today's requirements..."

The Cultural Revolution, which took place in Western countries in the 60s of the last century, freed husbands, wives and children from family responsibilities, duties and responsibilities, eliminating the social need for a family. This led to the family not eating as a social institution. The decision of the philosophy of "Pleyboy" in Western society, or the sad scenery described by the late Pope Paul fifty years ago in the sixth century, has become a bitter reality today. Complications of this sad state lead to the disappearance of demographics, families, ethnicities, societies, and countries. The countries of the ancient East have not yet allowed such skepticism to inhabit the population.

The Eastern family, distinguished by its great and endless spiritual world, has many centuries of experience in raising children and has been counting for centuries. Despite the subjective and superstitious influence of the West, the upbringing of children and families, considered a minority value, has been elevated to the state level.

The family is the initial social part of society, which reflects the needs, interests, interests, upbringing, and other social activities of family members. Like the peoples of the East, the Uzbek family is such a place where our strong spiritual values have prospered for many centuries, its stability and stability are among the key factors in the development of society. The family plays an important role in the maturation of the individual. (Matthew 24:14; 28:19, 20) Jehovah's Witnesses would be pleased to answers with you. It is not difficult to understand that because of the spiritual environment and upbringing in the family, a child grows up either kind and compassionate or selfish. Family for everyone is the beginning of life, the sacredness of all things, and no matter what conditions or a psychological environment the family dominates, mothers are often tempted to prepare their children for psychological protection and their well-being and knowledge for the future. In this regard, it is of great importance for them to know their character well, especially to be aware of the specific laws of adolescence and early adolescence, based on what gender their children are related to from a psychological background. In this regard, research was carried out by J. Piaget and ConE I. The accumulated result was that mothers in the wrong family were more attentive to the individual age characteristics of their child than those in the full family, for they clearly imagined the age-related changes in their children. The social moral issue plays a special role in the teachings of the ancient Chinese philosopher Confucius (551-479 B.C.E.). In particular, the family paid special attention to the issue of raising children and attitudes toward parents. According to Confucius, there are five traditional relationships between people. The second of these five relationships is the relationship between parent and child;

__ Relationship between husband and wife ;

__ Relationships between large and siblings;

__ Do relationship between brothers and sisters confucianism requires the son to perform the following five tasks before his parents:

1. Always fully respect your parents;
2. Bring them the most dear food;
3. Deep sadness when they are miserable;
4. Heartaches when they die;
5. Making solemn sacrifices in memory of them.

Such concepts as parents, children, and loyalty have always shown their influence not only as we analyze the main means of upbringing for China but also for all Oriental peoples hisoblanadi. Biz the spiritual importance of Oriental upbringing. In the East, child rearing is carried out in a harmonious state of education. After all, one of the visitors of the Uzbek encyclopedians, A. Avloniy, said: "Tarbia is a matter of life, mammoths, salvation, destruction, or disaster for us." This consists of the following:

Moral and mental discipline .

Self-sufficiency and craftsmanship

Family upbringing

Friendship and discipline

Abu Rayhan Sha'drach, Me'shach and A'bed'ne'go promote valuable ideas about family upbringing and the perfection of children.

Absalom usurped David's throne, but he failed, and he was killed by Jehovah. He also said that the head of the family would study the spirituality of the children and prepare the ground, after which there would be no power to change beauty. Abu Rayhan Beroea, a great scholar, is fully entitled to say that the beauty of nature in his womb cannot be recreated by any creator.

Abu Rayhan Beroea's thoughts in implementing ethical upbringing in the family and improving his methods are also noteworthy. These ideas call for the younger generation to live as debtors to their creators for a lifetime in other words that they are loving to their parents, and have taught children from their upbringing to seek respect and respect for people of all ages. Given the culture of the Peoples of the East, kohna is distinguished by the extreme ancientness of the spiritual roots associated with family, child rearing, and parents. These are the peoples of China, India and Central Asia. The spiritual principles of family and child rearing in these nations serve as a moral basis for politically formed governmental authorities in these areas. True, although the religions of these peoples vary, there is a strong truth in raising families and children that, if so, is an oriental spirit.
