ABSTRACT:

The Youth Parliament created in Uzbekistan plays an important institutional role in increasing the socio-political activity of young people. The scientific article analyzes the Youth Parliament and its organizational and legal foundations.

Keywords: Youth Parliament, Uzbekistan, youth policy, social and political activities.

Youth is the future of the nation, and its active participation in the political life of the country is an important factor for its development. In Uzbekistan, youth have the opportunity to contribute to the political process through the Youth Parliament, a unique platform designed to represent the interests and ideas of youth.

The Youth Parliament is an organization created to ensure the active participation of young people in decision-making that affects their lives and future. It provides a forum where young people can express their opinions, share ideas and propose solutions on important issues related to education, health, employment, the environment and other aspects of youth policy[1].

One of the main advantages of the Youth Parliament is that it gives young people the opportunity to be heard and participate in the decision-making process. Young people can take initiatives, propose bills and make proposals to improve living conditions and youth development in the country. This helps to form an active civic position among young people and develop leadership qualities.

In addition, the Youth Parliament promotes the development of dialogue between youth and government agencies. Young people have the opportunity to discuss their problems and ideas with government officials, which contributes to more effective interaction and the search for solutions. It also helps young people better understand and influence the political process[2]. The Youth Parliament is also a platform for developing leadership skills and professional growth of young people. Participation in its work allows young people to gain experience in organizing and conducting events, public speaking, teamwork and decision-making. This helps them develop as individuals and prepare them for future challenges.

Today, enormous efforts are being made to ensure active interaction between the Youth Parliament and government bodies and public organizations in order to represent the interests and ideas of young people from various fields and realize the full potential of youth parliamentarism. It is important to note that the proposals put forward by the Youth Parliament are taken into account, applied when improving bills and implemented in practice.

For the first time in the history of the UN, a system-wide strategy was adopted - the Youth Strategy until 2030 - "Strengthening democracy through the involvement of youth in public life." Uzbekistan is one of ten countries in the world in which this strategy is being implemented at an accelerated pace. The UN welcomed the creation in Uzbekistan in a short period of time of the Youth Parliament, the UN Youth Advisory Council, the adoption of numerous strategies, programs and financial instruments to ensure the real involvement of youth and their empowerment.

In conclusion, it is worth noting that the Youth Parliament is an important platform for the development of youth in Uzbekistan. It provides young people with the opportunity to be heard, participate in decision-making and contribute to the political life of the country. The Youth Parliament promotes the development of leadership skills, the formation of active citizenship and the creation of conditions for the professional growth of young people[3]. The President and the Parliament of the country place great hope in the Youth Parliament, and this will require enormous responsibility from young people. Indeed, today the head of state, the Government of the country and society fully support the activities of the Youth Parliament, in response to this, we, young parliamentarians, need to make every effort to provide young people with the opportunity to contribute to the development of Uzbekistan and create favorable conditions for their future.
