Annotation: The article focuses on issues such as a just society, the nature of fairness, and the ethics of leadership.

Keywords: Justice, just leader, state, moral character, law, society, etc.

The moral character of a just leader can easily replace the law. Our work will not be successful without the leadership of fair, honest, religious, knowledgeable and experienced leaders in all spheres, without the courage and zeal for the reputation of our independent country and its interests. In addition, we must be selfless in our joint struggle to bring its demands into our lives for the sake of justice and the rule of law. Justice and law should be a priority for all of us, big and small, regardless of gender, nationality, creed or position.

In the management of society, senior and junior officials serving in all branches of government must act in a fair manner to combat corruption, that is, in strict compliance with the laws adopted by the state and the moral and ethical procedures established by society. In this regard, it is recommended to implement the following measures as a tactical and strategic direction in the fight against corruption.

1. To reduce the cost of medicines and other specialized medical services so that every citizen has access to qualified medical care, and at the same time to take drastic measures against corruption, extortion, bureaucracy and protectionism in the treatment of patients. .

2. In the distribution of material and spiritual goods created by society, to carry out distribution work according to the contributions and contributions of each person, to prevent the sharp stratification of the population, that is, the division of the rich on the one hand and the very poor on the other.

3. Achieve unconditional compliance with the requirements of popular law, which is a mirror and arbiter of justice at all levels of law enforcement agencies. Regularly report to the public on the work done.

4. "Justice and spirituality are closely intertwined concepts, and where there is no spirituality, there will never be justice."¹. Justice and spirituality are inseparable. By clearing the ranks of officials of a just judiciary from immorality, bribery, greed, bigotry, and businessmen who do not listen to the grievances of the common victims, in accordance with the principle that only the spiritual can fight injustice. Appointing high-spirited people in charge of this work.

5. Any justice in the minds of children begins with the family, the relationship of parents to each other and to their children. The child sees the father as the epitome of justice, the mother as the guardian of justice. Any injustice-based relationship between parents is an ax to grind at the root of a child's rigid views on justice.

6. The student wants to see justice in the image of the teachers in the educational institutions where they teach. Any fair assessment of his knowledge boosts his confidence in justice and, conversely, an unfair "excellent" or "good" assessment of a student who is inferior to him because of his misconceptions or teacher greed is a dagger in his heart. pierced. A thousand regrets, a thief, a bribe-taker, a greedy teacher. Unfortunately, no. Such people should never be sent (brought) closer to educational institutions.

7. Every employee seeks justice from their supervisor in the workplace. When a leader is fair, his work will be blessed and his confidence in the future will increase. When a leader is unjust, gossip, slander, selfishness, and betrayal increase, and the moral and ethical environment in the community deteriorates. As a result, the team faces a recession. The most important demand of today in the fight against corruption, as the head of our state Sh.M.Mirziyoev said: "Without justice, the world will be dark, there will be no meaning in life. As we want to build a free and prosperous life for our people, my request to you as head of state is that only justice should once again prevail in our lives. "2, – promotes justice and its triumph, which are the product of philosophical thinking of scientific and practical significance. In short, the laws that violated the principle of justice have changed. The pursuit of justice has become a priority, and laws have begun to serve justice, the realization of truth. Of course, the laws still need to be reformed for this. At the same time, as the word justice is repeated in many areas, those who say "justice is first and foremost the law" are more and more worried about this category of people. first and foremost the law and the rule of law is justice. This is an axiom. Their decision must be legal and based on the rule of law. Only then will it work to ensure the rule of law, legitimacy, equality before the law, and the inevitability of punishment.³.
